Conclusion

(main paragraph)

Family is an important social institution that shapes a person's personality. Although nuclear families are popular in the modern age, I disagree with the statement as joint families provide financial security and shared responsibility. Firstly, financial security can be found in joint families. All the members of such families contribute to the economic welfare of the families and that is why any individual member does not have to bear any financial burden. Also, members share responsibility in joint families. This is why such families can arrange events and other household works in an organized way and no individual member has to take the hassle of managing everything. Though it is undeniable that in the modern world nuclear families are popular for promoting individual freedom of choice, nevertheless, I believe that joint families are happier and more beneficial for a person's overall growth. To conclude, despite observing the popularity of nuclear families I affirm that joint families offer more comfort to individuals which makes them happier.
