Conclusion

(main essay)

Many people have many cherished objects which are dear to them for different reasons. These objects remind them of certain special moments, events or perhaps persons. I have a Kindle which is one of the most favourite objects of mine because it was gifted by my father upon an achievement, it gives me an immense opportunity of reading books and this Kindle is a great companion to me.

Firstly, my father presented me this Kindle because he wanted to celebrate my admission to Dhaka University. Getting admitted to Dhaka University had always been a dream to me and therefore when this dream was fulfilled, my father gifted me this Kindle. The present made me really happy because as a bookworm I had wanted to have my own Kindle for a long time.

Moreover, I can read many books comfortably on Kindle which might not be available in print. Since many foreign books might not be available in printed version to our country, it becomes necessary to download them from internet. In such cases Kindle works effectively as it allows one to read such books free of cost. Furthermore, Kindle offers comfortable reading experience as the screen is bigger than a mobile screen and it feels like a page to human eyes.

Apart from these/ Finally, my Kindle provides me with fulfilling company. I can obtain mental peace while diving deep into the realm of stories. Additionally, books always keep me away from the chaos of everyday life. The depressing nature of the surrounding world can not overwhelm me due to my access to various types of books which becomes possible for Kindle.

To conclude, the fulfillment of my long cherished dream, access to a diverse range of books and peaceful company have rendered my Kindle as a dear object to me. (301 words)
