The article titled “A public cancer hospital in crisis” is an editorial article published in the Daily Star on January 12, 2025. This article is concerned about the dysfunctionality of cancer diagnosis equipment at National Institute of Cancer Research and Hospital (NICRH) which leads to the physical and financial sufferings of the patients. [thesis statement]

According to the article, NICRH being “the premier public facility for cancer care” (“A public cancer hospital in crisis, 2025) is alarmingly negligent about the functionality of cancer diagnosis equipment. [topic sentence] Six radiotherapy machines at the hospital are out of service and such an issue is forcing patients to delay proper treatment that is eventually worsening their condition. At this institute, there are machines which have not been working for years even. According to a report which was published last year by the Prothom Alo, along with the radiotherapy machines the X-ray machine was also dysfunctional for a while. Since the authority showed utmost indifference to address this issue, the cancer patients from poor background are admitting themselves to private healthcare facilities at huge cost and the others with lower financial status are risking their lives by waiting and thus providing a chance for the disease to spread further.

In reference to this article, this is concerning that the authority is not careful of the utility of the machines which are not only used for diagnosing cancer but also work as life saviours. [topic sentence] In my opinion, this editorial article is conducting responsible journalism since it is urging the concerned authority to take proper actions to solve this problem.

To conclude, this editorial article published in The Daily Star demonstrates a major hollow/ limitation in Bangladeshi public healthcare system which deserves highly to be addressed since majority of the people are from lower/ middle class background in our country.(305 words)
